Aussie Soles, a well established footwear company from down under, have made a long-distance journey to the shores of Britain, enabling us to take a closer look at their great range of footwear.

The newest model, the Marine, is a combination of a traditional beach sandal and a more functional deck shoe, available in fun colours and with a modern look to keep it both cool and practical.

Constructed from Aussie Soles' unique cell polymer foam material, these not only offer exceptional arch support for all wearers, but their rubber fused non-slip soles also mean that they work equally as effectively ashore, afloat, and for those trolley dollies that have to struggle up and down slipways all day.

With padded Velcro adjustable straps, everyone can be sure of a custom fit, whilst the comfortable inner sole works to massage and stimulate the blood flow. Available in an extensive range of sizes, from baby up to adult, and featuring the unique AusLite, which works as an anti bacterial layer to rebound mould, these are the perfect item for anyone who spends their summer endlessly darting in and out of the water.

Flare Hood from Henri Lloyd

The sun is in the sky and the weather is starting to warm up, but this is Britain, and the persistent chilly winds and colder evenings mean that you still need a warmer layer to keep you cosy this summer, which is where the new Flare Hood from Henri Lloyd comes in handy.

Although at first glance it looks like a thick chunky knit jersey, the Flare Hood is constructed with the use of polartec® Thermal Pro technology, which offers the best possible warmth to weight ratio: the 100% polyester internal velour creates air pockets that effectively trap air and retain body heat without adding any bulk to the product.

With specific design features for the male and female options, the men's has a full length zip whilst the women's is contoured to snugly fit the female figure, these are both fashionable and functional for use all summer, and well into the winter months too.

Extra protection from Line 7

Whether you are looking for a new jacket to wear onshore in foul weather, or you are hoping to invest in a new hard wearing outer layer to keep you dry during race officer and safety boat duties, the new Line 7 Offshore Jacket is just the thing.

Developed with a brand new 3-layer fabric system design, this jacket ensures the highest possible waterproofing and breathability rating, whilst also remaining as lightweight and comfortable as possible.

Everything about the design has been tweaked and developed to offer the wearer maximum comfort and protection: the hood alone has three different adjustment points to guarantee the most secure fit possible. The whole jacket has been shaped for ease of movement, with a longer length scoop back and adjustable two way stretch inner cuffs to prevent water intake.
